

MASAI MARA SAFARIS

A million animals on the move, Africa's big predators in abundance, red-robed Maasai warriors and Out of Africa scenery - if you're looking for that quintessential East African safari experience, then a Maasai Mara safari holiday delivers exactly what you think it should.

Kenya's flagship conservation area, the Maasai Mara National Reserve borders Tanzania's Serengeti and together they comprise the setting for the famous migration, a dramatic mass movement of wildebeest, gazelle and zebra that is irresistible to wildlife enthusiasts and nature photographers.

Game viewing is excellent all year round and even more so in the Maasai Mara's private conservancies where night drives and guided nature walks are offered as well as game drives.

The benefit of staying in the conservancies is two-fold: guests can easily access the Mara for the superb game-viewing and migration scenes, but are also able to retreat from the chaos into their own private - and unfenced - slice of the Mara. Hot-air balloon safaris and cultural interactions with local Maasai communities complete the broad range of Maasai Mara safari experiences.

We offer customized packages including camping, accommodation in lodges and game drives.

SAMBURU SAFARIS

Lying on the edge of northern Kenya's arid savannahs, the Samburu National Reserve is a destination that will appeal as much to the safari first-timer as it will to the veteran.

Samburu's savannahs and forests make for diverse big game country. Home to all the big cats, it's especially good for leopard as well as providing a haven for super-rare wild dogs and large numbers of elephants. The 450 bird species will delight birders while it's also the best destination for wildlife enthusiasts who want to see unusual animals that don't occur in Kenya's more well-known reserves.

Top of the list are the 'Samburu Big 5' - Gravy's zebra; the long-necked gerenuk; reticulated giraffe; besia Oryx; and Somali ostrich. But a Samburu safari also offers the opportunity to explore on foot and by mountain bike as well as the chance to visit Samburu villages and gain an insight into local life.

All in all the Samburu delivers a unique safari experience, especially in combination with Kenya's more famous Maasai Mara or Amboseli reserves. To visit this game-rich reserve with its palm groves and dense forests simply contact us for assistance with planning the perfect tailor-made solution.

AMBOSELI SAFARIS

Second in popularity after the legendary Maasai Mara, Amboseli National Park not only offers great game viewing but is also the place to go for the best views of iconic Mount Kilimanjaro. The world's tallest free-standing mountain actually rises just across the border in Tanzania but Amboseli has a postcard-perfect view of its snow-capped peaks, rising almost six vertical kilometers above the savannah. The best time to view 'Kili' is at dawn and sunset when the clouds lift and the light is clear and soft.

At only 392km<sup>2</sup> Amboseli is a small park and the range of animals is not as extensive as that of other parks in Kenya but streams from Kilimanjaro surface in the center of Amboseli, creating wetlands that support a rich diversity of wildlife and most of the classic big mammals are there.

An Amboseli safari can also be combined with several Tanzanian parks. Mount Kilimanjaro National Park and Arusha National Park lie just across the border and are the closest but the highlights of Northern Tanzania - the Serengeti, Tarangire and the Ngorongoro Crater - are easily accessible from this region.
